Shutting Down Business Not Based on Science

Governor Charlie Baker and Mayor Marty Walsh are pushing back on restaurants and bars again by allowing fewer and fewer customers dining inside but at least it is not as bad as New York. Gov. Andrew Cuomo and NYC Mayor Bill de Blasi ending indoor dining to prevent the spread of COVID.

Some 75 percent of the recent surges in new COVID-19 cases have been traced to private house parties and only 1.4 percent to eating establishments. Shutting down restaurants or severely limiting seating capacities will only ensure a move to more house parties and more infections

In the meantime, more and more businesses are going through economic hardships and will shut down which will affect more peoples' income. Already it has been predicted that some 20 percent of all local restaurants have closed for good and each day more add to that list.

Things are bad enough with the great hardships caused by the pandemic and now added to the mix are the crushing mandates of our political leaders at the state and local levels.

Story of the Christmas Crèche

by Bennett Molinari and Richard Molinari

St. Leonard Church in Bosotn's North End celebrates the Christmas season with a beautiful snow covered Creche.

We ran this column several years ago and have often been asked to run it again Hopefully in this year like no other, the story of the origin of the Christmas Creche with its universal meaning will help offer hope and shed light amidst the uncertainty of our times.

Christmas is far and away the most nostalgic and sentimental season of the year. There are traditions we associate with Christmas, observances that we faithfully perform every year that speak of family and friends often no longer with us. There are certain foods that are prepared only at Christmas or special ornaments that appear every year to take their place on the Christmas tree, most every family has traditions associated with Christmas that extend back into the mist of time.

Of all the traditions we lovingly perform at Christmas, none is more meaningful than arranging the Crèche under the Christmas tree. Each piece occupies a special place with a family story attached that enlivens it, giving it a special meaning known only to our loved ones.

The origin of the Christmas crèche (from the Latin cripia meaning crib) is remarkable in itself for it resides with St. Francis of Assisi, the Saint who called himself, "a fool for God." The story has come down to us through the writings of Saint Bonaventure in his Life of Saint Francis and through tradition. Francis is attributed with the introduction of the Presepio to the many customs associated with Christmas. The Presepio is described as a three dimensional representation of the birth of Jesus Christ, composed of mobile figures artistically arranged as well as realistic elements such as houses, rocks, plants etc.

The earliest representation of the Nativity can be seen in a fresco found in the catacombs of Saint Priscilla, 2nd century AD, portraying the Mother and Child, the Three Wise Men, Saint Joseph, and above a star with eight points.

In the year 1223, three years before his passing, Saint Francis was visiting Grecio, a small town in the hills of Tuscany, to celebrate Christmas. Francis realizing that the chapel of the Franciscan hermitage would be too small to hold the congregation for Midnight Mass found a niche in the rocks near the town square and set up an altar. He took a manger and filled it with hay, tied a donkey and an ox near it and with a crowd of people from the neighboring countryside, attended the celebration of Mass in front of the crib.

It was from this simple beginning that the Nativity scene, as we know it today evolved. The earliest Presepio or Nativity Scenes in Italy date to the 14th century. Ambrogio della Robbia created the first multicolored Nativity Scene in terracotta, found at the church of the Holy Spirit in Siena. The Council of Trent, which closed in 1563, issued precise norms for devotion to the saints and relics and encouraged the diffusion of the Presepio or Nativity scene as an expression of popular piety

The 17th century saw the appearance and development of scenic effects. Nativity Scenes became a mirror for the culture which produced them, reflecting the society of the day incorporating aspects of daily life with traits of intense realism: they were enriched with unusual and exotic elements and scenery. At this time the Presepio began to step out of churches to be displayed in the home, large statues were replaced with wooden figures sometimes partly of straw with head and limbs in terracotta, wax or wood adorned with sumptuous clothing.

The Nativity Scene as we know it today, whether simple or elaborate is the representation of the birth of Jesus, the Son of God, Who came into the world to redeem mankind; it is the most monumental event in human history, represented in tiny figures beneath our Christmas trees inspired by Saint Francis.

Dictionaries define religion as belief in divine or superhuman powers. Some sources say the etymology or origin of the word is doubtful, however its Latin root "religio" is defined as rev-

The history of building construction reflects the manners, customs, and degree of civilization of nearly all known periods of man's existence. As each nation developed its social customs and religious beliefs, so did it develop its architectural character. From the dawn of civilization, men have built shelters as protection from the weather, from beasts, and from the attacks of other men, but it is the history of the shelters that they have built for their gods or God, or because of their religious beliefs, that seems to cause all of the bits and pieces to fall together as in some giant jigsaw puzzle.

It all started in Egypt, which is known as the cradle of the art of architecture and the seat of the earliest known civilization of which we have any clear knowledge. That ancient

The Mayor said that our case numbers remain concerning, and that our hospital numbers also remain higher than we'd like to see. The City is staying in close touch with local hospitals to understand what they are seeing, and how we can support them.

EDITORIAL

THE NEW COVID RELIEF PACKAGE

by Sal Giarratani

Americans have been suffering for many months now due to the virus pandemic and to the political reactions of political leadership at the state and local levels. Things have been really bad since last March and finally there is a glimmer of hope the vaccine is here.

Thanks to President Trump's Warp Speed initiative, vaccines were developed and are already in use. Hopefully, the worst of this pandemic is behind us. We might blame Trump for his slow start but thanks to the federal warp speed drive, vaccines that usually take years, developed in months.

However, what is sad is the reaction up on Capitol Hill with that COVID relief package that has been stalled since late July and was passed on Tuesday, December 21st at 11:45 p.m. EST. A more than 5,000 page measure that contains far more pork than beef for the struggling working-class and middle-class economy badly impacted by endless economic shutdowns imposed by governors and mayors mostly from blue states I might add.

In the end, the House and Senate came to an agreement on a package that does very little to those most in need of some relief from their devastation since last March. The bill that goes to President Trump will contain, one, a $600 one-time stimulus check to everyone earning less than $75,000 per year and an additional $300 for 11 weeks to those unemployed due to the COVID pandemic.

The Republicans back in late summer were offering more money to American people but the Democrat leadership under Speaker Nancy Pelosi wouldn't support that earlier measure and subsequent measures since until this bill was just passed.

There is too much pork going overseas in the bill that has little to do with the plight of American workers and those small business folks trying to keep their business afloat and the local economy alive. We see the middleclass economy getting whacked, along with it the jobs of those employed in this economy.

President Trump should not sign this stimulus package and he should go on national television and tell the American people to demand that Congress pass a measure that helps the American people survive. This is no time to add on items and pet projects but to protect the American people.

It is time for Congress to stop flapping their gums and do their job?

L'Anno Bello: A Year in Italian Folklore

Opening Up to a New Year

by Ally Di Censo Symynkywicz

Note: L'Anno Bello is reprinting articles that were written before the Coronavirus pandemic. Obviously, advice on gatherings and reunions contained within are not applicable to this current time when social distancing (and mask wearing!) is the best practice. Please read these articles as a testament to the joy and love that imbues Italian celebrations — and as suggestions for ways to spend time in the future once this pandemic is finally over.

Sometimes, it appears as if the bulk of our Christmas festivities end the moment we flip over the December 25th calendar page. Gone are "Jingle Bells" and "All I Want for Christmas is You" from the radio, replaced by the steady rotation of everyday hits and standards. Gone are the tantalizing unwrapped presents from beneath the tree, having now been revealed of the surprises within. However, contrary to popular perception, the season of Christmas actually lasts for a much longer time. As the old carol about the three French hens can attest, Christmas continues for twelve days after the proper feast ends. The real close of the Christmas season occurs on January 6th, or the holiday of the Epiphany. Italians afford each of the Twelve Days of Christmas a special significance. December 26th, for example, is the feast day of St. Stephen, and Italians celebrate la festa di San Stefano by visiting family or going skiing in mountain resorts. For me, the Twelve Days of Christmas contain a magical and enchanted quality, laden with the sensation of being far removed from the bustle and grind of ordinary days. I spend the Twelve Days of Christmas in a haze, taking advantage of the vacation to catch up on grading, eat leftovers from the Christmas dinner, shop in blissfully uncrowded stores, and visit family members who have arrived from overseas. However, I also prepare for the most mysterious feasts of the Twelve Days of Christmas: the twinned holidays of New Year's Eve and New Year's Day. Bursting with folklore and tradition, these holidays seek to welcome a new beginning with hope and luck.

New Year's Eve carries a distinct and unique feeling from other days of the year, a strong atmosphere of anticipation and excitement. It is an aura that imbues the ordinary activities people undertake during the day on New Year's Eve — walking the dog, going to the grocery store, visiting the hair salon with a captivating patina of both nostalgia and enthusiasm, propelled by the knowledge that old year will soon give way to a new and exciting chapter. Even the twilight sky seems different on New Year's Eve, glowing with a jewel-like blue tone indicative of the unhurriedly lengthening days. The tangible peculiarity of New Year's Eve gave birth to a plethora of luck-themed folk traditions related to the holiday. New Year's Eve is a time inherently rife with insecurity, as we ponder whether the upcoming year will be worse or better than the last, sundry superstitions seek to improve good fortune within the next twelve months. The practice of making a lot of noise at the stroke of midnight, reflected in the abundant party horns and noisemakers of today, derives from the ancient belief that supernatural creatures wandered the Earth during times of transition. Loud noises could effectively scare these evil spirits away. Certain foods also possess lucky qualities for the New Year. In Italy, lentils are considered an auspicious food for New Year's Eve, since they are thought to resemble small coins and as such attract prosperity. They are usually paired in a dish containing a spicy pork sausage known as cotecchino. My grandmother fondly remembered a more unusual luck ritual practiced in the olden days in Italy on la Notte di San Silvestro ("St. Sylvester's Night" — this is what Italians call New Year's Eve, since December 31st is also the feast day of the fourth century Pope Sylvester I). She had to exercise great caution walking through the streets of Naples, where she was a boarding school student in the 1940s, during this night, as people tossed old and broken items out the windows in order to ring in the New Year with a fresh start!

I am not throwing anything out of my windows, but I do love to celebrate the New Year in a folksy and traditional manner with my family. We gather together and enjoy a special

Once a Neocon, Always a Never Trumper

I was not surprised to see that Jeff Robbins, a syndicated newspaper writer, had recently compared President Trump's Oval Office to being infested with disease-laden toxics in need of a good fumigation.

He takes a knock too at Rush Limbaugh when this radio host stated, "(It) can't go on this way. There can not be a peaceful co-existence of two completely different theories of life, theories of government, theories of how we manage our affairs."

Obviously, Limbaugh was simply expressing what millions of Americans are coming to realize. We do have two Americas. The one that keeps moving further away from our constitutional democratic republic and the one which believes that 244 years ago our Founding Fathers were on to something great, a government where power rose up from the people and not down from their government rulers.

Robbins quotes Abraham Lincoln prior to the start of the Civil War that people really need to think about what it means to destroy our national fabric but I also remember something General Robert E. Lee said during the days before the Civil War erupted. He saw anarchy and civil war before us and hoped to God that this moment would pass.

America is more divided today than it has been since the Civil War when one nation divided into two. Then, it was based on principles and geography; today it is based on principles that cross through all of our states.

Rather than ridiculing President Trump and the nearly 75 million of us who voted for him on Election Day, we need to find a way to bring us all together.

I believe the integrity of our election system has been called into question by what happened this past election in Wisconsin, Georgia, Pennsylvania and Michigan. Did the many apparent irregularities in those states rise to the level of upturning election results is truly and forever in question! With the Courts keeping out of the fray and as if the alleged voter fraud were the third rail not to be touched.

Joe Biden speaking on the day the Electoral College certified his 306 electoral votes, he stated that in this nation, our leaders do not take power but that power is granted from the people. Many wondered if that really is true anymore. This is the issue I feel Jeff Robbins just doesn't understand.

Like Robert E. Lee I really do fear for the future of America and what it should mean to each and every one of us.

CHAPTER 36 Stormy Waters

The Riccis came into the backyard in order of seniority, Egidio leading the group. Frank, the oldest brother, came next, followed by Alberto and Roberto. Mario and Lorenzo remained in Boston to mend fishing nets, their specialty, for an upcoming trip. Carla remained to cook and keep house for them. Egidio greeted Grandma with a kiss, while Frank, Alberto and Roberto stood back, waiting to see how Grandma and the family would receive them and their father. After Grandma kissed Egidio on the cheek, she beckoned to the three brothers to join our clam bake, a signal that all was forgiven, particularly what had happened at the school dance a couple of weeks ago. They responded immediately, headed to the table where each of them took a heaping plate of Grandma's delicious spaghetti. The brothers sat on the steps leading down to the garden, while Egidio took a chair next to Grandma at the head of the table. From their position on the steps, the brothers were able to size up Pietro sitting beside Mom. Tension kept building in Pietro, who could feel their eyes sizing him up. Spotting what was going on, Dad decided to walk over to the brothers and asked them if they would like to play a game of bocce. The brothers declined, preferring to remain on the steps where they could intimidate Pietro. Feeling more and more uncomfortable and wanting to break the tension, after completing supper, Pietro motioned to Anthony, Bobby and Charlie to join him for a walk. Once Pietro and the brothers left for their walk, Auntie Stella let loose with one of her bombs. She asked Egidio, "Where's Carla and why isn't she with you?" Auntie Angie turned beet red. Daggers were jumping from her eyes as she motioned to Mom to shut her up. "She remained in Boston to keep house for her brothers, Mario and Lorenzo," Egidio replied. Auntie Stella quickly shot back, "Why didn't they all come with you?" The table began to shutter, as Auntie Angie was boiling mad and ready to leap at Auntie Stella. Normally, she would have screamed out, "Stella shut up!" Restraining herself in front of company, she simply asked Auntie Stella to go to the kitchen and bring out more spaghetti. Seconds later, Auntie Angie followed Auntie Stella into the kitchen. Once the door closed behind her, muffled sounds of what appeared to be an argument between the sisters could be heard. Grandma, trying to distract Egidio from what was taking place in the kitchen, struck up another chorus of "O Sole Mio." The brothers, knowing something was going on in the kitchen between Pietro's cousins, didn't utter a sound. Mom, sizing up the situation, ran into the kitchen to warn her sisters that the Riccis were sitting on the steps, straining to hear everything being said. Entering the kitchen, she gestured to Angie and Stella to be quiet, the brothers were listening. Auntie Angie, needing to express her anger, resorted to Italian sign language. She called Stella by name. The moment Auntie Stella turned in her direction, Auntie Angie began to bite her hand, a Neapolitan gesture that means, I can kill you. From that point on, not a word was spoken for the Riccis to hear, but Auntie Angie made it quite clear that Auntie Stella should shut up.

The three sisters emerged from the kitchen pretending to be laughing for the benefit of the Riccis, carrying fresh bowls of spaghetti to the table, leaving the Riccis puzzling as to what just took place in the kitchen. As the three sisters sat at their places, Egidio, once again responded to Auntie Stella's question. "Lorenzo and Mario remained in Boston to repair the family's fishing nets. Carla remained to tend house and prepare meals for them. Fishing nets require constant maintenance, Mario and Lorenzo are experts in this regard." Auntie

Important Information About in Your Drinking Water

Boston's drinking water is provided by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority from the Quabbin Reservoir and is distributed lead-free to homes and businesses.

However, some plumbing and older service lines can introduce lead into your household supply.

Running taps uninterrupted for two minutes in the morning helps to flush lead out, but if you have a lead service pipe, removing it is the safest solution.

Mrs. Murphy . . . As I See It

before Christmas and there is a silence in the sky. No thunder in the clouds and reindeer bells can't be heard. So is Santa on his way??? It doesn't feel that way ... Up in the North Pole Santa is busy sending out letters to East Boston kiddies, residents and business friends. Santa's Elves were laid off due to the pandemic, and no toys were made. The Elves have gotten fat and lazy and the Reindeers just lag around eating all day. Mrs. Santa Claus is disgusted, she hasn't been able to get her hair and nails done, so she cooks, eats and cries a lot ... This is the first Christmas that Santa can't deliver toys to children. So Santa decided to write letters ... Santa writes, my dear friends in East Boston, Santa will be missing all of you this year due to the virus. Many believe it's a deadly bacteria spread throughout the world from China to kill off the population. Being hundreds of years old my risk is high of contacting this virus. As much of the public is afraid to leave their homes, so am I. The world is suffering, from unemployment. Small businesses and restaurants have been hit the hardest! The world of Washington

T'was the night politics continues to relish in power, glory and money. How long can Washington bureaucrats continue printing money to give out stimulus checks? Businesses want to open without government rules ... So, this year I send greetings from above to all the people I have come to love ... Kelley's Pub, I'll miss the red carpet treatment you extend me. Santarpio's Pizza the same goes to you. To my friends at the banks, Everett Savings, East Boston Savings and First Priority, I send Christmas Greetings and a Happy New Year. To my friends, State Representative Adrian Madaro, State Senator Joe Boncore, Boston City Councilor Lydia Edwards, newly elected Revere State Senator, Jessica Giannino, Revere City Councilor Tony Zambuto and Dan Rizzo, I miss you guys and I'll see you hopefully next year. To President Donald Trump, you've done the best job of any sitting president. Your achievements exceeded putting America First. Being replaced by Democrat Joe Biden, has to have come as a blow to you and the party (my condolences). ... My dearest and oldest friends, the Lombardo family; Vinny, you're the best, continue your charity work and my blessing to you and your family. Joe Macabe of J&M Mechanical if ever I need services I'll call upon you. Joe Mario of Century 21 your support over the years, coming out to greet me has not gone unnoticed, I'll see you next year I hope? To the Seniors at the Central Square Senior Center, I miss you already ... And looking back, Gus Serra, if it weren't for you, East Boston people would not be paying only forty cents to travel through the tunnel ... Cargo Ventures if I can't get my toys to the kiddies next year I'll call upon your outstanding service ... My friend Joe Young, you haven't been seen around, hope all is well with you and Doug Curtis! ... East Boston Community Development Service, Director Al Caldarelli, keep up the good work you're doing in East Boston and Winthrop ... So with sadness in my eye, and before I cry, I want to apologize for not being able to come and bring toys to the kiddies, and enjoy the friendship the people of East Boston have bestowed upon me. My Elves are saddened after being without a job for months.

I promise you this, come hell or high water; my sled will land next year with reindeers so jolly, and toys so plentiful that no pandemic can stop this jolly ole soul from delivering my toys to all the good girls and boys.

IS MBTA VERSTATING BUDGET ILLS DUE TO COVID?

by Sal Giarratani

A message from Public Transit Public Good Coalition:

"We need a transit system that works for all. This means safe, affordable, and accessible service for all communities. Even as COVID-19 has reshaped our lives, public transit remains essential to the riders who make hundreds of thousands of trips a day, especially to the frontline workers who have kept our communities running during the pandemic. The MBTA's Fiscal Management and Control Board should vote no on service cuts."

Is the MBTA overstating its worries over a $579 million budget deficit due to COVID-19 and talking about imposing major reductions in service planned for next spring and summer? An independent transit panel, The MBTA Advisory Board, which represents the cities and towns served by the T. said "that there was no budgetary justification for a host of proposed changes."

Marty Walsh recently held a press conference and was joined by Mike Vartabedian, of the Machinists Union District 15 and, Lee Matsueda from Community Labor United and Rick Dimino, president and CEO of A Better City.

"These proposed cuts are a threat to our economy, our regional climate and housing goals, our collective health, and our work to close inequities across all facets of city life," Walsh said in a statement. "I offer my assistance in working with state legislators as well as the incoming Biden-Harris administration to find solutions that do not involve inequitable service cuts."

The MBTA did make cuts and the cuts were far less than expected. It does look like management did listen to what folks were saying. The transit system remains, however, deep in the red and is still hoping for some action on the federal level to help mitigate the losses resulting from the pandemic and the drastic drop in ridership.

The future of Mass Transit across the country has been put into jeopardy and we are a long way from a real solution but one must be found and the sooner the better.

Dress Up Your Landscape with Winter-Inspired Container Gardens

by Melinda Myers

Clear out your fall containers and make room for some winter greenery. These planters are sure to brighten those dreary winter days and add life to your landscape.

Transform weatherproof summer and fall containers for winter. Fiberglass, plastic, cement and wood will hold up to the cold, ice and snow. Don't subject terra cotta and glazed pots to the harsh elements that can cause them to crack. Remove faded fall flowers and add a bit of potting mix to fill the container within two inches of the top. Or select a new weatherproof container and fill it with potting mix.

Consider your overall landscape design and other outdoor winter decorations when creating or purchasing a holiday planter. Place a couple of winter planters on your front steps or dress up your patio, deck or balcony and enjoy the view from the comfort of your home. Don't overlook those hanging baskets. Fill them with winter greenery to elevate your winter containers to a fun new level.

Fresh-cut needled evergreens like spruce, white pine, fir and broadleaf evergreen boxwood and holly combine nicely to form the backbone of your container design. Make it easy by using spruce tips to create vertical interest in a container. You only need to set a few in the center of the pot to look like a pro. Surround these with graceful white pine boughs to anchor the arrangement to the container.

Add sprigs of other evergreens for additional texture and shades of green. Next, it's time to put your creativity to work. For those that prefer a natural look, consider white birch branches and stems of red twig dogwood, corkscrew willow or contorted hazelnut. Add a bit more color with berry laden winter holly branches and dried seed rudbeckias, allium, and coneflower seed heads or hydrangea flowers. Finish off your arrangement with a few evergreen cones and a bow.

Or add a bit of glitz with painted and glittered cones, twigs, ornaments, or other holiday adornments. You can purchase these or create your own with a bit of paint and glitter. Just make sure your materials will hold up to the winter weather.

Once your arrangement is complete, water thoroughly. The moist soil helps keep greenery fresh and in place. Once the soil is frozen you can stop watering. The cold weather will help keep your greens looking good throughout the holidays and beyond.

Extend the life of your greenery with an organic biodegradable antitranspirant. These materials help seal in the moisture, delaying the browning of cut greens. Always read and follow label directions carefully. Most need to be applied to evergreen boughs outdoors and allowed to dry before bringing it indoors or beginning your arrangement.

Winter container gardens brighten up the landscape all season long.

For additional ideas and a bit of inspiration, watch my Create Beautiful Outdoor Evergreen Containers video. You will find more ways to enhance your landscape with winter containers.

CHRISTMAS IS ALMOST HERE

Well, this has certainly been a year we will never forget no matter how hard we try. Seems like the curtain went down on normal back around St. Patrick's Day, the vaccine for the virus is out and folks have already started to give it a shot. I can't wait to roll up my sleeve.

I hope everyone is masking up, doing so isn't the end of the world. Also, keep distancing yourself when you are out and about. To tell you the truth, even before this virus struck, I always kept my space between strangers out in the world. I hate getting sick. I got my flu shot, too.

Merry Christmas, Happy New Year.

REMEMBERING FOLKS

Remembering Speaker Thomas P. Tip O'Neill Jr. His birthday would have been December 12th and he would have been 108 years old. Frank Sinatra would have just turned 105 on December 12th. Finally, my dad Dominic Giarratani Sr., would have been 108 on December 22nd.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

LOVE JIMMY JAY ON WEEKENDS ON WMEX

I so love WMEX Radio on 1510 am on the dial. Every Saturday and Sunday, Jimmy Jay holds down the fort with some great music and great interviews. Several weeks ago, he interviewed Ruth Pointer from the Pointer Sisters. She actually has written her memoir of sorts called Still So Excited. Two weeks ago, he interviewed Brenda Lee; before that the likes of Bill Medley of The Righteous Brothers and before that Connie Francis. Now, there is someone you can call a survivor of life. Glad to hear her songs again.

Getting back to Ruth Pointer, I so loved the Pointer Sisters and did lots of disco dancing to their music. They had a sound worth dancing to, and I did just that. Eventually, I will be checking out her new book and I will let you know my take on it.

Finally, this past week, Jimmy played a great Christmas song I never hear before by Tommy James & the Shondells called "It's Christmas Again"; I wonder how that one got past me back in the day.

I also heard a great new recording by the Classics IV. Yes, they are still around and singing, but just not this year when time stopped or all of us. Their new recording is their first ever Christmas song; "All I Want for Christmas is You," a neat Classic IV spin on an old holiday tune.

HERE'S A SHOUT OUT TO ...

2020 WORLD SERIES (Blu-ray) Shout Factory

The Los Angeles Dodgers are World Series champions of 2020. On a quest for redemption after losing the World Series in 2017 and 2018, the Dodgers clinched their 2020 title in six games against the Tampa Bay Rays during a season — a year — so unique. The Fall Classic pitted the two best teams of a condensed regular season and expanded Postseason at a neutral site, the new Globe Life Field in Arlington, Texas. The Dodgers and Rays would split the first four games in a back-and-forth affair. Clayton Kershaw and Walker Buehler were stellar for the Dodgers in Games 1 and 3, and the offense loaded up with go-ahead home runs from Cody Bellinger and Justin Turner. After a shocking loss in an all-time great Game 4, the Dodgers still needed two more wins to put to rest the ghosts of recent Postseason disappointments. The Dodgers jumped to an early lead in Game 5 behind Mookie Betts and Willie Mays World Series MVP Corey Seager. The legendary southpaw Kershaw and a trio of relievers would keep the Rays at bay to set up the clinch in Game 6. The Dodgers would take a late lead this time behind the duo of Betts and Seager again, and a whole new generation of Dodgers fans would celebrate their own heroes and championship, the first for the franchise since 1988 when Kirk Gibson hit an improbable home run. In five years at the helm, Manager Dave Roberts has now led the Dodgers to five consecutive NL West Division titles, three National League™ pennants, and one World Series title, returning the Commissioner's Trophy to the franchise whose first championship was led by the iconic Jackie Robinson.

GIVEAWAY CHANCE TO WIN A FREE COPY OF "2020 WORLD SERIES"

The Los Angeles Dodgers finally captured the World Series of 2020, after defeating the Tampa Bay Rays in six games to capture the championship, following their two futile attempts in 2017 and 2018. Name the Dodger player who was named the "Willie Mays World Series MVP." Send email entries to: bobmorello@comcast.net before December 27, 2020 to be eligible to win. Winners to be chosen randomly from all correct entries.

TROMPIE - UPONDO & NKINSELA (DVD) Film Movement

IndiePix Films invite home audiences for a thoroughly entertaining trip to Sollywood with two all-new, adventure-filled home entertainment releases in their acclaimed Retro Afrika collection: Trompie and Upondo & Nkinsela. Trompie (1975), is the only feature film adapted from Topsy Smith's incredibly popular book series, Trompie is set in 1970's Apartheid South Africa, in the picturesque town of Kwaggaberg, and follows Torien, the leader of a neighborhood "gang," and his three mischief-making pals: Bikkies, Rooie, and little Dawie, Together, they're know as the Boksombende, and they're typical 12 year olds, full of brilliant ideas and escapades, and whenever they find themselves in a pickle, they talk their way out of trouble, repentant or not. Upondo & Nkinsela (1984), features Pondo and Nkinsela, two haphazard, dysfunctional friends who end up going on a series of crazy adventures. From ruining a bride's wedding day to destroying a client's hairdo in a beauty salon, to escaping a ghost, talent agents, and mob bosses, the two friends always seem to come out on top, despite the havoc they cause wherever they go, in a feature-length series of 13 vignettes.

NORTH END ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

LOUIS CAVAGNARO, President

Serving the Community for Over 60 Years!

ROLLBACK TO THE STATE'S REOPENING PLAN:

Governor Baker announced a 25% capacity limit for most industries. These restrictions are in effect starting this Saturday, December 26th until January 10th.

As a reminder, on December 16th, Boston moved back into a modified Phase 2, Step 2 of reopening, for at least three weeks. We are also going to be following the State's rollback on capacity. But that does not change the industries temporarily closed to in-person use in Boston:

• Museums, movie theaters, gyms, etc., will not reopen to in-person use until at least January 6th.

Starting Saturday, December 26th, in accordance with the State's new restrictions, restaurants, close contact personal services, places of worship, indoor golf facilities, and retail businesses in Boston will be reduced to 25% capacity. Office spaces will be reduced from 40% to 25% as well.

The Mayor reminded everyone that the goal of these rollbacks is to slow the spread of the virus now, so we can avoid a more severe shutdown later. For more information about reopening policies in Boston, visit: Boston.gov/Reopening.

FEDERAL COVID-19 RELIEF PACKAGE:

On December 22nd Congress passed a $900 billion COVID-19 relief package.

The Mayor, who has continually called on the Federal Government to do more to help the American people during this crisis, thanked the Massachusetts delegation for their advocacy on the issue.

He said that this bill is a necessary step in the right direction. It provides support for families, small businesses, schools, and vaccine distribution; it helps protect jobs; it boosts unemployment benefits; it provides more access to food through increases to SNAP benefits; and it extends the federal eviction moratorium.

However, the Mayor insisted that Congress must go further to help the American people, saying, "The Biden-Harris administration plans to act immediately to bring comprehensive support. We hope that will include direct aid to cities and towns. This crisis is far from over. People and communities are still struggling, every day, and recovery is going to be a long process. We need the Federal Government to do its part in getting the country back on its feet. That is what we expect from the leaders we elect to Washington. So it is my hope that, when Congress returns from break, they will not waste a moment in delivering the aid that the American people deserve."

HOLIDAY HEALTH AND SAFETY GUIDANCE:

The Mayor reminded residents that this time of year, we sometimes see an uptick in package thefts and car break-ins.

He urged people to make arrangements to ensure packages won't be left unattended, whether they're sending or receiving them. The Postal Service offers special delivery instructions which can be submitted through their website.

The City is also reminding everyone not to leave valuables in their cars and to double check that cars are locked. If you must keep valuables in your car, keep them out of sight.

For tips on avoiding theft, and what to do if you experience it, are available at: BPDNews.com.

He also reminded everyone to remain vigilant with COVID-19 precautions throughout the holiday season, saying, "We are still in a critical period of this crisis. The virus does not go away during the holidays. This is not the time to let your guard down. We all have the responsibility to keep our communities, and each other, safe. Our choices now could make all the difference in what our January and February look like."

He reiterated that during the holidays, you should celebrate only with the people you live with; there should be no holiday parties; and that the City strongly encourages all Boston residents not to travel, as travel increases the chance of getting and spreading COVID-19.

If anyone is planning on gathering with family outside your household or traveling, we urge extreme caution. In Boston, indoor gatherings should be limited to 10 people or fewer, and everyone should stay six feet apart and wear masks when they are not eating or drinking.

The Mayor issues a reminder that getting tested for COVID-19 does not protect you from infection. In other words, you cannot "test your way in or out" of a safe, traditional holiday gathering. No matter what, gathering in a group will increase your risk of contracting or spreading COVID-19. If people do gather, the Mayor said, you should get tested before and after.

The City has posted additional holiday health and safety guidance on its website.

The Mayor acknowledged the hard decisions and hard conversations families have been having this holiday season, saying: "I know it's hard to be away from the people you love especially during the holidays. And it's hard to say 'no' to our loved ones. Many of us have been having difficult conversations with family members about what to expect this year. Instead of gathering in person, consider safer ways to connect — such as through virtual platforms. This is a time to be creative, and keep the holiday spirit alive."

NEW TECHNOLOGY OPPORTUNITY FOR SENIORS:

The Mayor discussed one of the ways the City has gotten creative this holiday season. Most years, the Age Strong commission hosts a Holiday Calls event at City Hall for seniors. Usually, we welcome hundreds of seniors to City Hall to make free, long-distance phone calls to loved ones around the country and the world.

This year, we can't bring the seniors into City Hall. But we're more concerned than ever about isolation, loneliness, and economic insecurity among our elders. So we're teaming up with partners on a special program in place of the phone call event.

AT&T is making a $30,000 donation to our partner Tech Goes Home, the digital equity nonprofit. Tech Goes Home will work with our Age Strong Commission to provide devices and technology training to older

The Mayor said, "Access to technology is a pressing need in Boston's older community, and we want to do everything we can to keep our seniors connected. I want to thank AT&T, Tech Goes Home, and our Age Strong team for keeping this tradition alive and helping our residents connect with their loved ones this holiday season."

He also encouraged seniors to reach out to our Age Strong Commission to learn more about ways to stay connected and engaged in the New Year.

Coping with isolation and

The Mayor closed with a message for anyone who is struggling with mental health issues or other challenges right now, saying: "The end of the year is a time for reflection, and we will all be reflecting on a very difficult year. Many people have been hit hard by the pandemic. We have all had to make sacrifices. It's okay to feel overwhelmed, tired, or sad. Don't be afraid to talk to someone or ask for help."

He shared some of the resources available, if you are feeling hopeless or lost:

You can reach out to a health provider or trusted community organization, or you can call 3-1-1 and we'll connect you to resources.

You can also call or text the Samaritans 24/7 Helpline at 877-870-4673.

For people facing domestic violence or abuse of any kind: Never hesitate to call 9-1-1 if you or someone you know needs help.

The Mayor said that he appreciates the community's help with this, asking everyone to stay in touch with friends, family, and neighbors so that no one feels alone this holiday season.

He closed with this reflection: "We still have a long way to go in this crisis. But we have turned a corner in this pandemic. And we have reasons to be optimistic. The vaccine is rolling out. Every day, people are getting vaccinated — including right here in Boston. When the time comes, I ask everyone to follow the lead of our health care heroes and medical experts and take the vaccine. It's another act that we can all take as individuals to protect ourselves and our families, and bring our community safely through this crisis. We are finally at a point where we feel like we have less days ahead of us in this virus, than we do behind us. And while we don't know exactly when this pandemic will end, we know that better days are coming. So I am asking everyone to hang in there. Take care of yourself, and look out for one another. Listen to the public health officials and keep doing your part to stay safe and protect those around you. We will get through this difficult time, if we all continue to work country was originally a narrow strip of land on both banks of the Nile River, and we know it now as the Nile Valley. We also know that ancient man walked into this valley before 10,000 B.C. However, the Egypt that is of concern at this writing is the culture that started about 4400 B.C.

It is most important to understand that the ancient Egyptian believed in life after death through the immortality of his ghost or double which he called "ka." Thus, because of his religion, it was considered very essential to preserve the body after death in order that the ghost might retake possession of it at some future time. He was reluctant to throw dirt over a dead body, hence the employment of tombs and stone coffins. These stone coffins were eventually given the name of sarcophagi (plural) and sarcophagus (singular). A statue or portrait of the deceased was placed in the tomb so that the returning ghost might recognize those features, which the corpse had lost. This point is also most important because it certainly identifies an origin of religious or memorial art. Food, drink, and money were also provided to start the journey into the new life. Because of their religious beliefs, the Egyptians mummified their dead, and built indestructible places of burial, such as pyramids and multi-roomed

If you have ever received spiritual gratification because of a visit to a religious grotto, or because of a memorial service for a deceased member of your family ... remember ... so did the Egyptians, 4,400 years ago.

Nanna & Babbononno

by John Christoforo

It's Christmas time, and when my grandparents were alive, this was the point in time, they began to buy the non perishables that would be on the dining room table on Christmas Eve and Christmas day. On his way home from work, Babbononno would make a side trip to the North End and buy the things that wouldn't go bad over time. He would buy nuts, dates and figs that would follow the main meals on both Christmas Eve and day. Seeing he had a sweet tooth, there was a candy store on Salem Street that could put a dent in his wallet. He would combine both American and Italian candy in his order just in case we kids didn't like the Italian stuff, but we liked everything.

Next, Babbononno would check out the meat markets on Hanover and Salem Streets and order things he wouldn't be picking up until around the 23rd or 24th. He would do the same at Giuffre's Fish Market which was just outside the Sumner Tunnel. Christmas Eve is traditionally celebrated with seven fishes, and Babbononno wanted to make sure he could obtain eels and the fish he considered the best for December 24th, so he would order them. From there, he would head to a store to buy Italian coffee and biscotti that accompanied espresso after dinner. On his way to meet up with his friends for a cup of coffee or a drink, my grandfather would stop at the liquor store on Hanover Street and buy a bottle of Italian brandy, and maybe Stregga, and Gagliano, the sweet after dinner drinks the ladies might enjoy. Once he would leave his friends, it was a tossup as to whether he would take the to T to get home or stick his thumb out in front of the Sumner Tunnel and hope someone would give him a lift to East Boston.

Nanna and my mother would do the same with the East Boston vendors around the same point in time. They wanted to make sure their orders could be accommodated when the time came. There was one thing left besides the perishable foods, and that was solely up to Babbononno to take care of. My great uncle Tony's homemade wine.

Uncle Tony or Zi'Antonio was Nanna's brother and Babbononno's best friend. My grandfather considered him the best winemaker on the East Coast and would buy a couple of gallons of Zi'Antonio's best when either Dad or one of my uncles could drive him to Orleans Street in East Boston, where Uncle Tony lived.

None of my relatives in Babbononno's generation drove. They relied on their sons to drive them where ever they had to go. Back then, the women didn't drive either. Mom got behind the wheel of Dad's 49 Chevy only once for a driving lesson, but gave up after a couple of minutes and Dad was grateful she quit.

When it was time to buy the wine, usually my father would take Babbononno to Uncle Tony's. Both my great uncle and grandfather would sample the vintages and Babbononno would choose the ones he wanted. During the selections, the two of them would sample the various wines that were displayed on the kitchen table. This meant that by the time we were ready to head home, Babbononno was feeling no pain and neither was my great

I remember one episode in particular. Dad drove Babbononno to Uncle Tony's and I tagged along hoping some of my cousins might be around. None were and I wound up sitting at the kitchen table with the old timers and Dad. One of Zi'Antonio's sons was home, John Ceruolo. Cousin John had been blinded years earlier and lived with his parents for safety sake. He was standing up leaning against the kitchen stove. To get to the sink, anyone heading in that direction had to pass by John. Seeing that Babbononno wanted to wash out his glass after each type of wine he sampled, he had to pass cousin John. The first few times there was no problem, but after the wine started to take effect, Babbononno would bang into John with, "Oh scusa, Giovanni." The contact was made both on route to the sink and on the way back. Finally, in exasperation, cousin John yelled out, "Zio Mike, who the hell is blind around here, you or me?" Dad laughed but I was afraid to open my mouth. Needless to say, by the time we got Babbononno back home, it was time for him to take a nap.

Later in the week, it would be determined who would be at the dinner table on Christmas Eve and Christmas day. Once this was established, the lists could be completed that would determine how much food to order. Of course, if Nanna and Babbononno were going to have a table of 12 people, Nanna and my mother would cook for about 20, just in case.

When Christmas was about 2 or 3 weeks away, our phone would ring off the wall. Band leaders and contractors would call looking for Dad to play just about every type of Christmas party that could be planned. Some were down town office parties with 2 or 3 musicians playing music of the season. Dad booked in everything he could spacing the events out so they wouldn't overlap. Some of them were so close Dad had to hire a chauffer to get him from one place to another in order to be on time. Even back then, parking in down town Boston was next to impossible. Dad's driver would stop in front of the building where the office was located and Dad would run inside carrying his bass violin. As soon as he was in the right office, the cover would come off the bass, the other side men would get ready and the music would begin. One year, the Globe did an article on Dad calling him Boston's busiest bass player.

This routine would continue for Dad, Uncle Paul and Uncle Nick through the afternoon of Christmas Eve. At around 4:00 p.m., the offices would empty out and the men in my family would head home. Chances are they rested or napped before it was time for the traditional Christmas Eve at Nanna's table. Gone would be the tuxedos worn that afternoon. In place of the black bow ties would be Christmas neckties that were apropos for a Christmas Eve dinner.

We would feast of the variety of fish that Nanna, Mom and Babbononno cooked. Babbononno would have to skin, clean and cook the eels as no one else would touch them. As a matter of fact, I can't remember anyone except Babbononno eating eels.

While the men of the family waited for the different courses to be served, they discussed the places they had played for those two or three hour Christmas parties. Sometimes complaining sometimes bragging about the sidemen that were with them. The next day, Christmas, was a repeat of the night before. This is the way it was all through Christmas season when I was a kid and the money Dad and my uncles made put the food on the table.

From the descendents of Mike and Jenny Contini, (Nanna and Babbononno) Buon Natale e Felice Capo d'Anno. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. Stay safe in 2021, and may GOD BLESS AMERICA

In Italy or here in America, if you live in an Italian household, there's no doubt in my mind you must have received at least one beautifully wrapped panettone during this holiday season! This Italian Christmas cake is often referred to as "pane di tono" or "luxury cake" and originated in Milan many centuries ago. While various legends surround its origination, in Italy it remains customary for people to bring a panettone along when invited into a home during the holiday season for an espresso, lunch, dinner or dessert.

Growing up, I cannot begin to describe just how many beautifully wrapped Panettone I watched friends and relatives bring to my family during the holiday season. Of course we never wasted food so on Christmas morning or even during the weeks ahead, panettone was served in a variety of ways! It was eaten after dinner for dessert and even served lightly toasted and buttered for breakfast. My favorite of all was when we used a panettone to make bread pudding or Budino Di Pane Di Panettone, as it is often referred. This easy to make dish uses few ingredients and is absolutely delicious to serve as a breakfast on a weekend or holiday morning and equally as scrumptious when adding a dollop of fresh mascarpone whipped cream, and plated as a dessert! I encourage you to take those beautifully wrapped panettone you received as gifts this holiday season and turn them into a Budino Di Pane Di Panettone your family and friends are sure to love!

PANETTONE BREAD PUDDING

Budino Di Pane Di Panettone

1 loaf panettone bread (I use homemade, store bought can be substituted), cut into cubes

8 large fresh eggs 1 1/2 cups heavy cream 2 1/2 cups whole milk

1 1/4 cups granulated sugar

Generously butter a 13 by 9-inch baking dish. Arrange cubed panettone in the dish, evenly. In a large mixing bowl, beat together eggs, cream, milk and sugar. Pour this mixture over the panettone, pressing the bread down to ensure it is evenly immersed. Cover and place in the refrigerator for a half hour.

Preheat the oven to 350°. Uncover panettone custard mixture and place in the oven for 40-50 minutes, or until it is golden colored and cooked in the center (mixture will still be very moist).

Flavoring/extracts are not necessary in this recipe as the flavors are already in the panettone!

A recent letter to the editor in the New York Post pointed out something worth mentioning.

Latest Poll Numbers On Question of Voter Fraud

On Tuesday, December 14th, President-elect Joe Biden took to the airwaves to say "the will of the people prevailed ... This election was honest, free and fair ... I'm convinced we can work together for the good of America - now is the time to turn the page."

However, there still appears to be many folks out there across America not ready just yet to turn any pages. According to the latest polling data available, a majority of Americans seem to agree that issues of voter fraud are serious problems for them. Another poll showed that 83 percent of Republican voters believed that the presidential election results were rigged by the Democrats. Thirty percent of Independents believed the same thing. More surprising, 20 percent of Democrats agreed

Too often it is so obvious that the media has forgotten its mission. It is one thing for Kevin Cullen in his Boston Globe commentary to attack Trump talking about the return to Immediately Biden Democrats and a chorus from the fake media said the words were taken out of context.

Reuters went even further. According to this news agency, Biden "likely meaning to say voter protection instead of voter fraud." We shouldn't be getting an independent news source's interpretation of what Biden meant to say. That's not their job. How can any of us trust a media that forgets its role delivering news?

Getting back to the Hunter story, why did the whole lot of them, fake media and big tech, suppress everything until after Election Day? Sounds like collusion to me.

meal that ends with my chocolate-vanilla marbled ring cake for dessert. Ring cakes are yet another lucky food for this feast, since their shape symbolizes the cycle of the year. I enjoy hearing my grandmother tell stories about the quirky traditions that characterized New Year's Eve in her small Italian hometown. such as sweeping out the door with a broom at midnight in order to chase away the old year. Sometimes my family plays Bingo together, known as tombola in Italian. Games of chance are popular components of New Year's festivities around the world, for they mimic the unpredictable thrill of good fortune. We watch the televised New Year's celebration in New York, and when the famed Times Square ball finally drops at midnight, we hug and kiss and wish each other a happy New Year. This is my favorite tradition, as it reminds me that being surrounded by the love of family and friends is the best wish I can ask for all year! New Year's Day is far more low-key. Known as Capodanno, or "head of the year," in Italian, this is a day devoted to recuperating from the previous night's parties. Superstition advises that the way you start the New Year is the way you will end it, so I like to spend New Year's Day doing a little bit of all the things I love, such as writing, reading, baking and watching a movie. New Year's Day is also laden with a unique and pleasant feeling. The sky seems bluer, the birds sing loudly, and snow sparkles like diamonds on the ground. I believe the whole world is starting anew!

The twinned holidays of New Year's Eve and New Year's Day are purely magical, brimming with mystery and anticipation and the electrifying hope of good fortune. They are two feasts of the Christmas season that shine with unique lore and traditions. They inspire us to start a new cycle encircled by the love of family and with a hopeful optimism in our hearts. By greeting the New Year with joy and goodwill, as customs around the world dictate, we are actually creating our own good fortune. Whether we feast on lentils or shout loudly at the stroke of midnight, New Year's traditions remind us that love and confidence are exactly what we need to equip our journey into the unknown. Yes, it can prove frightening to leave behind the familiar and the comfortable and start fresh, but New Year's celebrations offer us the chance to improve our outlook on life. Without an ending, there can be no beginnings, or opportunities for journeys of self-discovery. This New Year's, surround yourself with loved ones and promise to carry an attitude of cheer and wonder for the next twelve months to come! Happy New Year to All! Buon

Leroy Neiman Artwork For Programs and Poster In the '60s and '70s

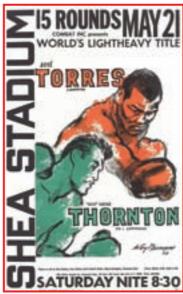

Leroy Neiman was a terrific artist and one of his favorite subjects was boxing. He had a great eye for the sport that translated into his artwork depicting it. He was often commissioned to do the posters and cover work for many of the fights during that period, and he could often be seen at ringside with his sketch pad out. Leroy spent a lot of time around the gyms where he got to know the boxers and trainers quite well.

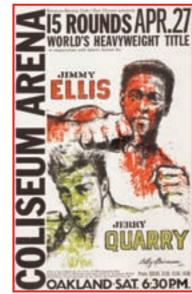

Here is a selection of his poster and program art for a number of fights.

HOOPS and HOCKEY in the HUB

YORK — Yes in a way, that is what the Cape Cod baseball league is all about. Do well there and you may, just may, impress the scouts enough to be selected in the MLB draft and eventually make the roster of a Major League team.

But that's not the only way to start down a career path in baseball. The latest evidence of that is Jared Porter, who interned in the front office of the Brewster Whitecaps of the Cape Cod League nearly two decades ago. It all paid off just recently when Porter, now 41, was recently named the General Manager of the New York Mets.

However, there is more to Jared than just a fascination with baseball. You see, he went to high school in our region at Thayer Academy in Braintree, where he played with Brian Sullivan, the brother of former Bruins head coach Mike Sullivan — now the bench boss of the Pittsburgh Penguins.

He served as the captain of both the baseball and hockey teams at not only Thayer but later at Bowdoin College in Maine. "He was a very good defenseman," Mike Sullivan told New York Post writer Greg Joyce in a phone interview when discussing his cousin.

As related in another New York Post piece, it was Ben Cherington, then the former Red Sox minor league director (and later Sox GM) who interviewed Jared for a position with the Red Sox farm team in Fort Myers, Florida.

But the expected short interview took two hours as Porter discussed the players performing in the summer league at some length. "Jared loves players," Cherington told Post columnist Joel Sherman. "He loves to learn about players, evaluate players, watch players and get to know players. He loves everything about the process and has for a long time."

Mike Sullivan, who is 11 years older than Jared, played at Boston University and then for more than a decade in the NHL before embarking on a coaching career. After serving as the Bruins head coach he later went on to guide Pittsburgh to two Stanley Cup championships.

Jared chose the front office side almost immediately after college. He went on to experience several successful seasons as both the Rex Sox and Chicago Cubs won World Series when he was affiliated with them. He later moved on to the Arizona Diamondbacks and now is back east with the Mets.

"He could have just as easily wound up on the hockey side," said Mike Sullivan. "But obviously it has worked out for him and we (the entire Sullivan extended family) are thrilled. We all know how difficult it is to be successful in pro sports. Jared has worked extremely hard to get the opportunity he has been given with the New York Mets. I know he will do a great job. He is really smart and has a sense of humility about him that resonates with a lot of people."

Porter will have his work cut out for him as the Mets finished last in the National League East Division with a 26-34 record over the much shortened MLB regular season in 2020, missing the playoffs for the fourth straight year.

However, expectations for the future are high, following the sale of the Mets to billionaire hedge fund manager Steve Cohen. The New York media feel that translates into money to spend toward the acquisition of high quality free agents.

But Porter may not go that route. "There are buy-low opportunities, there's minor league free agency, Major League free agency, first round picks, 20th round picks, $10,000 signings from Latin America, $1 million signings from Latin America." In short, his selections may come from anywhere and everywhere.

Whatever happens, it will be interesting, particularly when the Mets come to Fenway to take on the Red Sox in interleague contests. Let the games begin.

HUBIE BROWN RETURNS

— The veteran ESPN basketball broadcaster will return to calling NBA games this season after sitting out the bubble in Orlando this past summer.

However, given that he is 87, he will begin the season by calling games remotely, either from home or in a studio located in Bristol, CT, the home of the network.

After playing college hoops and graduating from Niagara University in 1955, Brown joined the U.S. Army and played for its basketball team. He eventually spent nine years coaching at the high school level in New York State and New Jersey.

He then became an assistant at William and Mary and later at Duke University before joining the Milwaukee Bucks as an assistant in 1972. The Bucks of that era — included NBA superstars Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Oscar Robertson, a team that the Celtics defeated in seven games for the 1974 NBA Championship.

He then became the head coach of the Kentucky Colonels of the American Basketball Association (ABA), leading them to the league championship in 1975.

After the Colonels folded with the merger of the ABA and the NBA in 1976, he became the head coach of the Atlanta Hawks, followed by the New York Knicks and (much later) the Memphis Grizzlies. He got his broadcast start in the middle of the 1980s and has continued on that path ever since. Welcome back to the NBA, Hubie.

STILL ATOP THE CHARTS AFTER ALL THESE YEARS —

It was 50 years ago (December 21, 1970) that a king visited the White House. He was not a king who reigned over a geographical nation but rather one who was recognizable across America and throughout the world.

For it was on that day five decades ago that Elvis Presley (called "The King of rock and roll" by many people) visited President Richard M. Nixon in Washington. A half century after his visit, the photo of Elvis with President Nixon remains the No. 1 picture requested by those contacting the National Archives.
